

What you need to know about Planned Giving

Planned giving simply means planning a donation now that will reap benefits for your community in the future. Many donors find planned giving very attractive because it offers a tax-smart way to reach their philanthropic goals.

Planned gifts come in as many shapes and sizes as people do. There are several types of planned gifts including bequests, charitable gift annuities, retirement plans and life insurance policies. For many people, making a charitable bequest in their will may represent the first real opportunity they have to provide significant financial support to the hospital. For others this kind of gift can be the final donation they make in a lifetime commitment to the hospital.

Some people want to give an outright gift and some want to include the Lakeshore General Hospital (LGH) Foundation in their last will and testament. Using life insurance is another way to support the LGH Foundation. Purchasing annuities can be a wonderful vehicle to provide people with fixed payments for life, and the LGH Foundation with a source of funding.

Dedicating a portion of your wealth to charity is one of the noblest gestures you can make. Giving back to your own community offers an intensely personal reward.

The Lakeshore General Hospital Foundation relies on the support of estate planning professionals to help our donors find the planned giving option that is best for them.
